FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

Q. What is a Qualifying Agent (QA)?

- A. The Qualifying Agent (QA) is the individual designated on behalf of the license applicant, which may be a sole proprietor, LLC, corporation or partnership, to take the trade exam for a license classification on a contractor's license. Not all license classifications require a trade exam. In order to replace a QA, if a trade exam is required when replacing a QA, it must be taken within 90 days. The QA may be an owner, officer, partner or full time employee and there may be more than one (1) QA who passed the trade exams for a license. The license is not issued to the QA unless they are the owner who provided the financial statement. The Business and Law does not have to be taken by the same person who took the trade exam or to replace a QA, unless there are complaints on file.

Q. May the person taking the exam (qualifying agent) be listed/designated on more than one license?

- A. If they are an owner, they may be listed on more than one license. The qualifying agent must be an owner or full time employee. If a full time employee, they cannot be named on more than one license. The qualifying agent who is a full time employee of one licensee may also obtain a license as an owner in order to perform projects outside his full time employment.

Q. Is the qualifying agent considered the owner of the license?

- A. Not if the qualifying agent is only a full time employee. The license is issued to the entity or individual providing the financial statement. If the qualifying agent leaves, the company must notify the Board within 10 days and designate a new individual, who has passed the trade exam if required, within 90 days; the Business and Law exam is not required to be taken to change or add a qualifying agent. After 90 days, if a new QA has not been designated, the license classification is removed from the license or the license is made invalid.

Q. Is the Business and Law exam required for classifications which do not require a trade exam?

- A. The "Business and Law" exam is not required; even when there is not a trade exam. The new QA must supply a resume of experience and if applicable, provide environmental training certificates.

Q. How do I know which classification is designated on the license?

A. The license classification is listed on every contractor's license, along with a monetary limit. There is an outline of classifications listed in the rules of 0680-1-.16 and this list may be downloaded from our website at:
<http://www.state.tn.us/commerce/boards/contractors/pdf/contLicClassOutline.pdf>

Q. How do I schedule to take the trade exam?

A. You may schedule an appointment by registering with PSI, Inc., the exam vendor. For more information, review the "Candidate Information Bulletin" on the web at: <http://www.state.tn.us/commerce/boards/contractors/pdf/CIB2006.pdf> or you may contact PSI at 800-733-9267 or visit their website at www.psiexams.com. Exams are offered in several states.

Q. Does Tennessee reciprocate with other States?

A. Yes. Tennessee has agreements with several agencies in the following states: Alabama (Residential, Commercial, HVAC and Electrical), Arkansas (General Contracting), Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina (Residential and Commercial); and South Carolina. Attach a copy of your trade exam score, if available, and also the license verification form must be completed by your state, and submit with your application. Some states may charge a fee to complete the verification form.

Q. I have taken a residential and commercial building exam. The license I am requesting to be added is for residential, only. Will commercial be added automatically to the license?

A. No. The licensed company would need to apply for a "revision" to their license. Revisions must be approved by the Board and are due by the end of the month prior to the next Board meeting. You may apply by completing the appropriate revision forms to: add classifications, increase your monetary limit, change mode of operation (transfer), or change name on a license.

You may go to the following link for a list of these different forms:

<http://www.state.tn.us/commerce/boards/contractors/formsandapps.html>

Q. I currently hold a license and want to get out of the business. May I transfer my license to another company and just work for them?

A. No. A license is not transferable to another entity. They would be required to apply for a new license. As long as you remain as a full time employee, you may be designated as a the QA. However, should you leave, you must notify the Board within 10 days. In addition, the licensed entity must designate a new QA within 90 days.

Q. May the codes office deny a permit prior to 90 days before the new QA is added?

A. The Board does not have jurisdiction over the local permit requirements.

Q. What happens if a new Qualifying Agent has not been designated after 90 days?

A. After 90 days, the license is considered invalid and any contracting would be subject to penalties for unlicensed violations. If a contractor has more than one classification, they may request to remove the classification which is designated by the QA who left the company.

Q. How long does it take to be added on as a QA on a license?

A. These are processed by staff in the office and it may take 30 days to get all the information in the system. You may check the website to see if the QA has been changed at:

<http://www.state.tn.us/commerce/reports/contract/index.html>

As long as you have notified the Board in writing within 10 days and submitted the new QA information and trade exam scores within 90 days, you have complied with the law. If additional information is needed or the application was submitted incomplete, you will be sent a letter.
